They have tried it all: wars and peace processes, terror attacks and closures, road checks and Intifadas. After long decades of futile attempts to settle the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, there is only one solution left: a football match. Based on a successful Israeli novel of the same name, The 90 Minute War – directed by veteran Israeli director Eyal Halfon and starring Moshe Ivgy – offers a thought-provoking take on the conflict, and an ingenious plan for a resolution.

“The film raises more troubling questions than it answers, but it’s fascinating throughout...”

Having started a residency at a Buenos Aires hospital, Jewish psychiatrist Ezequiel is especially perplexed by the behaviour of one of his patients, Fermín, who communicates only by quoting lyrics and titles of tango songs. Suspecting that Fermín has been misdiagnosed for decades, Ezequiel starts researching his history, uncovering some dark secrets from both his patient’s and his country’s past. His research would also make him fall in love – with tango, and with Eva – a tango instructor and Fermín’s granddaughter. Glories of Tango is as delightful and intense as its thrilling dance scenes.
